QUALITY CHARTER

The Association of Independent Tour Operators

AITO is the Association for independent and specialist holiday companies. Our member companies, usually owner-managed, strive to create overseas holidays with high levels of professionalism and a shared concern for quality and personal service. The Association encourages the highest standards in all aspects of tour operating.

EXCLUSIVE MEMBERSHIP

AITO sets criteria regarding ownership, finance and quality which must be satisfied before new companies are admitted to membership. All members are required to adhere to a Code of Business Practice which encourages high operational standards and conduct.

FINANCIAL SECURITY

An AITO member is required to protect money paid by customers to the member for any holiday sold under the AITO logo. This protection applies to customers who are in the UK at the time of booking or to overseas customers who have booked directly with the member. Members have to comply with the UK Government Regulations in this respect. Members submit details of their bonding or guarantee arrangements to the Association on a regular basis.

ACCURATE BROCHURES AND WEB SITES

All members do their utmost to ensure that all their brochures and other publications, print or electronic, clearly and accurately describe the holidays and services offered.

PROFESSIONAL SERVICE AND CONTINUAL IMPROVEMENTS

All members are committed to high standards of service and believe in regular and thorough training of employees. Members continually seek to review and improve their holidays. They listen to their customers and always welcome suggestions for improving standards.

MONITORING STANDARDS

AITO endeavours to monitor quality standards regularly. All customers should receive a post-holiday questionnaire, the results of which are scrutinised by the Association.

SUSTAINABLE TOURISM

All members acknowledge the importance of AITO's Sustainable Tourism guidelines, which recognise the social, economic and environmental responsibilities of tour operating. Those demonstrating their achievements beyond the pure acceptance of this principle are recognised by the award of 2 to 5 star status.

CUSTOMER RELATIONS

All members endeavour to deal swiftly and fairly with any issues their customers may raise. In the unlikely event that a dispute between an AITO member and a customer cannot be settled amicably, AITO's low-cost Independent Dispute Settlement Service may be called upon by either side to bring the matter to a speedy and acceptable conclusion.

A DAY ON SAFARI

It seemed like I had only just closed my eyes when I was coerced back to the real world by Joseph carrying my wake up cup of tea. It was still dark as he tripped over the guy, I waited for the crash that never came. Recovering, he simply said 'hodi', the polite announcement of his arrival. I dragged myself up and wondered if I could make it through another day of non-stop action. Just then a robin started singing and my thoughts drifted away from tiredness.

I dressed quickly, slaked down the tea, and walked down to the roaring fire. Jake and Robson, our guides, were already there, wrapped up as though they were in the arctic and sipping steaming coffee. I wore a light sweatshirt.

We watched the sky pinken and the chorus of bird calls ascended to a crescendo. The rest of the party straggled out of their tents and wandered over to the fire. After a light breakfast of cereal and toast, we set off on our first activity of the day. Driving at this time was a little chilly, but not as bad as Jake and Robson would have you believe. Soon, however, it was warming up and as we moved through the reserve, it erupted into life.

We returned to camp around nine for a full breakfast, a complete mix of the Continental, English and American varieties. Almost too full to move, a walk was suggested after breakfast, and Jake led us out on a game trail into the wilderness. Not a route march this, as we were too busy looking for those creatures usually missed when driving – birds galore, ant lion, trapdoor spiders and dung beetles. We returned to camp, before the sun reached its zenith, to be confronted by cool drinks and a lunch platter fit for a king.

As the heat rose to a shimmering mirage, I retired to my tent, contentedly reviewing the morning's events and soon lapsed into slumber. At three I awoke, saturated and numb. I tumbled into the shower and was immediately refreshed by the coolness of the water. After dressing I returned to the fire area for afternoon tea, passing up on the freshly baked banana cake.

Later we departed on another drive, this time through the riverine forest to a tranquil spot on the river where we sipped cocktails as the sun dipped below the skyline. We returned to camp under the beam of the searchlight as we eagerly looked out for the nocturnal animals of the bush.

The chance for another shower to wash the dust away before dinner, announced by the drum which echoed out across the bush. A hearty meal, wine and song rounded off another day in paradise.

GENERAL INFORMATION

SAFARI CONSULTANTS

Safari Consultants has specialised in designing tailor-made holidays to East and South Africa since 1983. We are a small 'hands-on' company and pride ourselves with the quality of our knowledge, personal service and expertise in designing your perfect holiday.

We are members of AITO, The Association of Independent Tour Operators. Established in 1976, the AITO symbol has become the hallmark of good holidays from specialist tour operators. All AITO companies are fully bonded and governed by AITO's independent dispute settlement service, which means you are in safe hands when you book with an AITO member.

The common aim of AITO members is to provide an attractive alternative to mass-market holidays, combining high standards backed up with a more knowledgeable, personal and caring service.

This booklet contains general information and advice to help you decide what you want and explains some simple precautions to help you avoid problems while on holiday. It is however not a substitute for discussing your holiday plans with us in detail. At the back of the booklet you will find our terms and conditions, two information forms and a booking form.

We trust you will find the information of interest and we look forward to hearing from you.

HEALTH

Malaria is present in some parts of all sub-Saharan countries. Even if you are not staying in an affected area you may pass through one. We strongly advise that you take anti-malaria prophylactics. Certain types of prophylactic can have serious side effects. If you have not taken malaria tablets before it may be worth discussing this with your doctor, who may be able to prescribe alternatives. Do follow the instructions about taking them before you depart, while you are away and after you return. Insect repellent should be used in the evenings and exposed limbs covered up.

We recommend that you take with you whatever works best for stomach upsets, which can be caused by sudden changes of diet and climate. Please consult your doctor about any other necessary inoculations. These vary from time to time, but, when this brochure was published, immunisation against typhoid, yellow fever, tetanus, hepatitis, and rabies was recommended by MASTA for visitors to all East and Southern African countries.

Do remember that immigration requirements in some countries may necessitate having formal vaccination or inoculation certificates, particularly for yellow fever. It is worth taking a record of any immunisation you have had in case you need medical treatment while you are on holiday. Some inoculations and vaccinations have to be given in multiple doses over a period of time so please ensure that you allow sufficient time for this before you leave.

Immunisations can be obtained by contacting your local GP or at Medical Advisory Service for Travellers Abroad (MASTA) Travel Clinics. At the time of publication there were twenty or so of these around the UK. Ring the MASTA Medical Advisory Service on 0870 606 2782 (www.masta-travel-health.com) to find out which is the most convenient for you. The website will give you the option to take 'Personalised travel health advice' for which there is a charge of £3.99). Alternatively you may prefer to contact The Fleet Street Clinic (www.fleetstreetclinic.co.uk) Tel: 0207 353 5678.

Information is also available from the automated Travellers Healthline Advisory Service of The Hospital of Tropical Diseases 020 7950 7799 (the code required for East Africa is 55, for southern Africa 73, and for Seychelles/Indian Ocean islands 32). Their website is www.thehtd.org

Please remember that the sun is potentially very dangerous. A good sun hat (and spare), high factor skin protection cream, sunburn lotion and good quality sunglasses are important for your health as well as comfort. Look after your binoculars well. Using binoculars which have been knocked out of alignment, even if only slightly, can cause headaches, giddiness and nausea. Please also read what is said about medical and health insurance in our Terms and Conditions.

SAFETY

It is obviously unwise to put temptation in the way of those who are amongst the world's most poverty stricken. To some locals what glistens probably is gold especially if worn by a foreigner. Our advice, for your personal safety as well as that of your belongings, is to leave valuable jewellery and watches in a safe place in your home country and not to take them on holiday. The same is true of expensive looking costume jewellery. Money and cameras need to be covered or hidden when visiting urban areas and crowded markets. Leaving unguarded cameras, binoculars and other valuables on beaches or in vehicles, open or closed, is simply inviting trouble and tends to get an unsympathetic response from insurers. Similarly your hosts at lodges, camps, hotels and guest houses etc. will thank you for not leaving temptation in the way of their staff whether in your tent or room or around the campfire.

Africa has more than their share of urban deprivation and would-be urban explorers should take advice before venturing off the beaten track in many cities.

Safari activities are potentially hazardous by their nature. Some, such as white water rafting and balloon safaris, may even be classified (rightly or wrongly) as "hazardous activities" by life assurance companies seeking to avoid policy liability. Other activities, such as game drives and walking safaris, are less hazardous but still not risk free. In the bush, complete risk elimination is impossible even for the best and most experienced safari operators.

The level of risk with which you feel comfortable is entirely a matter for you! For some, the experience of sleeping with nothing between them and the night sky and the surrounding bush, pales into insignificance the risk of insect bites and nocturnal visits of the feline kind! On the other hand we occasionally hear operators' tales of holiday makers who love, or have been sold, the idea of a safari holiday but, who on arrival, find the proximity of wildlife and the night sounds of the bush so alarming that they ask for a night watchman in their tent or bungalow and are unable to sleep. To be candid, such holiday makers should not have been sold a safari holiday in the first place.

Everyone has a different level of risk which they find acceptable or enjoyable on holiday. Whatever yours may be, it is important that we know. Constant anxiety will mar a holiday as surely as boredom. Fortunately countries and their safari industries are sufficiently varied to be able to provide the vast majority of clients with holidays at risk levels with which they individually feel entirely happy.

Your safety in the bush is partly in your own hands in any event. We select our safari operators for their skill and experience and it is important that you listen to what they say and follow their instructions. Although it may seem extremely obvious, a little caution and circumspection will go a long way to avoid injury or mishap. Misplaced bravado is often responsible for holiday accidents abroad, whether in the bush, on the beach or elsewhere.

COMFORT & STANDARDS

Safari holidays are available at all grades of comfort, from the most luxurious to the most basic. In discussion with you we will help you pick the level which suits you and your budget best. However the more remote or mobile your safari, the less luxurious it is likely to be.

In any case, Western standards of reliability and efficiency are sometimes hard to achieve in Africa because of poor roads and communications, lower technological standards and the vagaries and extremes of climate, not to mention cultural differences.

Spare parts and other necessities can be hard or impossible to obtain in some countries for many reasons, including hard currency shortages, although recent liberalisation of currency restrictions has eased this problem considerably.

You will certainly enjoy your safari more if you can put up with the occasional punctured tyre with a sense of humour. In such circumstances you will not, except in an emergency, be asked to assist, but an offer of help if you feel able or inclined to give it, will undoubtedly improve relations with your hosts, whether it is accepted or not. Similarly, although safari operators are generally incredibly adept at providing ice and cold drinks in the remotest places, the ability to forego such pleasures with a good grace on the rare occasions when something has gone wrong will stand you in good stead. Washing and sanitation arrangements on safari have improved significantly in recent years. Most lodges and permanent camps now feature en suite facilities and these are now common even in tented or seasonal camps. However do not expect the standard of sophistication or comfort you would find in a European hotel. In tented camps you may well find that hot water is available on demand but not instantly out of a tap. For obvious reasons, where en suite facilities are not provided, washing facilities, showers and toilets may be shared and located a short distance from your hut or tent. Do not assume, particularly in tented accommodation, that water used for washing is fit to drink or for brushing your teeth. Shower water may well come direct and untreated from a nearby river, stream or lake. You will usually find flasks or jugs of drinking water in your accommodation.

Your itinerary will describe the type of accommodation, its location, main features and degree of comfort in more detail.

COMMUNICATIONS

Telecommunications do not compare favourably to those in Europe or North America. Land-line telephones are much less reliable and direct dialling is unavailable in some parts. The use of mobile phones is increasing throughout our destinations and you may wish to check with your provider if a service is available from the country you are visiting. We would bring to your attention that the use of mobile phones may cause offence to other travellers, and if you are intending to use one, please be courteous to others. Some lodges have already banned the use of phones within their operational jurisdiction. Our advice would be that you are going on holiday so have one and keep your phone turned off when you're around other travellers!

Emergency Contacts

We suggest that you use our office as an emergency contact while you are away in Africa. In areas where there is no mobile communication, links can be poor and it will be easier for us, and less frustrating, to get messages through to you than it will be for your relatives, friends or colleagues. We can be contacted:

During office hours: 01787 888590
After office hours: 07831 556164
Email: info@safariconsultantuk.com
Facsimile: 01787 888599

Our final documentation will always give you the local contact details relating to each aspect of your safari. Remember there are time differences between the UK and our destinations.

MONEY & CURRENCY

What your holiday price includes will be specified in detail in your itinerary. How much money you take with you is obviously a matter of personal choice and will depend on the kind of holiday you book. The more remote your safari the less likely you are to be within range of a bank, bureau de change, hotel or lodge willing to accept or change travellers' cheques; although probably you will have correspondingly less need to do so. Hard currency cash, particularly US dollars and UK sterling, are the easiest to change and the most likely to be accepted in lieu of local currency. One obviously needs to take more care of cash than travellers' cheques. Most safari countries still have drastic shortages of hard currency at a national level and, until recently, most had draconian foreign exchange restrictions. Some countries have a very small limit on the amount of local currency one can export. This is one reason why UK banks are usually unable to supply African currencies. You may therefore find it convenient to travel with some low denomination notes to use when you arrive, before you have acquired any local currency. Hard currency usually makes a more acceptable gratuity where it is legally allowed to be held by local people. Some countries require airport departure taxes and similar levies to be paid in hard currency, usually US dollars or UK sterling, and may not offer change in those currencies. It is well worth ensuring that you have the exact denomination notes ready for this purpose. Mostly however, such taxes are now included within the price of your air ticket.

AIR TRAVEL

We do not use international charter flights. For outward and homeward travel to and from Africa we use scheduled flights on major airlines. Your itinerary will specify the kind of outbound and/or homeward flights on which you are booked. Wherever possible we try to book non-stop flights (i.e. flights on which the same aircraft carries you from departure to destination without intermediate touch-downs or changing aircraft). Whether or not we can do so depends on where you go and when you want to travel. The alternatives are direct flights with intermediate touch-downs (i.e. you travel on the same aircraft from departure to destination but will land at intermediate airports at which you may or may not be able or obliged to leave the aircraft temporarily) or indirect flights (i.e. you travel on more than one aircraft changing at one or more stopovers en route).

We have no control over the airlines whose flights we use so we cannot guarantee that your flights will proceed as booked. Airlines sometimes introduce intermediate touchdowns or even stopovers at short notice which were not advertised at the time we booked your flight. Unfortunately it is not unknown for internal flights in Africa to be prone to this and on occasions to re-routing or cancellation as well. Similarly, events such as mechanical faults, strikes, adverse weather, air traffic control delays and passengers checking in but not boarding can all delay your flight. Force majeure events of these kinds are outside our control. We do not have representatives at airports. We will obviously do what we can to help by telephone but it is in your own interests to take up difficulties and complaints with the relevant airline's airport staff yourself. However, while you are on holiday, your itinerary will most often provide for you to be met by your next hosts or their representative, on arrival on an internal flight. Similarly you will often be delivered to an airport or airfield for an onward flight by someone from the hotel, lodge or camp at which you have just been staying. Whilst they are not obliged to assist you with air travel difficulties, you will usually find them knowledgeable and helpful. Unless you are travelling on full fare first or business/club class tickets, it is usually impossible to transfer your booking to another flight without paying the additional fare unless the airline is responsible for your inability to travel on the booked flight.

Wherever possible we use special fare prices to hold down the cost of your holiday and this imposes extra limitations on your ability to change your itinerary once you have booked. Due to the inability of airlines to run seating requests properly, we do not book or guarantee any seat numbers (British Airways offer their customers the chance to pay for advance seating - see their website for details). In our experience seat reservation is unreliable; depending as it does on the airline using the expected type or configuration of aircraft and adhering to the request. Seat reservation is more reliable on outward flights than it is on homeward flights. You are more likely to get the seat you reserved if you check in well in advance. An early check-in will give everyone more time to sort out a problem if there is one and will help you avoid flight overbooking problems which can occur even with reputable airlines. All airlines now operate flights on which no smoking is permitted at all. We do use light aircraft charter flights in some itineraries. In some places they are the only feasible way of getting to certain destinations without unduly protracted and uncomfortable ground transport over very poor roads. These can provide remarkable game viewing opportunities and a genuinely bird's eye view of the terrain. If you have not flown in a light aircraft before you should be ready for a journey which is both more noisy and turbulent than scheduled air travel, particularly if you are flying in the middle of the day or early afternoon in the local hot season. Please note that light aircraft (used as scheduled flights or as charters/air transfers) do not have toilet facilities. Baggage allowances are specified in our general country information but you should be aware that internal domestic flights and light aircraft charter flights will have lower baggage allowances than those applicable to your international flights, typically only 10-15kgs. On light aircraft charters, where both weight and space are at a premium, you may well not have the option to take excess baggage on payment of an extra charge. You may also be required to declare your weight.

Our country guides and itineraries give as much information about airport departure taxes as we reasonably can. However these are subject to change from time to time, often without notice. As mentioned previously, we mostly include international airport departure taxes in the price of our holidays, although Malawi still requires these to be paid in cash on departure.

GROUND TRAVEL

Your ground travel arrangements will be specified in your itinerary. It is not always possible for us to identify in advance exactly what kind of vehicle will be used. In general the vehicles used by ground transfer operators in relatively developed areas (e.g. from airport to hotel) will be VW Caravelle minibuses or similar vehicles. In remoter areas, particularly where you are being met by a safari operator, you are more likely to travel in a Landrover or Toyota Landcruiser. Game drives will almost invariably be by 4x4 Landrover or Landcruiser. In East Africa, park regulations require vehicles operating in parks and reserves to be closed (i.e. to have sides and a roof), although increasingly these are beginning to 'open up' more. 'Closed' vehicles usually have roof hatches. In southern Africa the regulations are different and your game vehicle is more likely to be open sided and to have a canvass awning to provide shade. We are not aware of any evidence to show that open game vehicles are less safe than closed vehicles. Travel in open vehicles may on occasions be more windy and dusty, but, in our experience, they offer better viewing opportunities. In general game vehicles do not offer the levels of luxury and comfort of modern motor cars, but, given the terrain in which they have to operate, this is not to be expected. Where river or lake transport or game viewing is part of your safari or available, our itineraries describe the kind of boats used or available but for operational reasons availability and type of boat may change. Canoes and mekoro (dugouts) and white-water rafts are described in more detail in relevant itineraries.

Where rail transport is involved the type of accommodation and degree of comfort are specified in the itinerary.

IMMIGRATION FORMALITIES, PASSPORTS ETC.

You will need a valid full passport to visit all of the countries in which we operate. Most countries require visitors to have passports expiring at least six months after your expected return date. Even if they do not you are advised to ensure that your passport expires well after you expect to return to allow for unforeseen delays. We advise you to take a photocopy of the relevant pages of your passports to ease the difficulties caused when they are lost or stolen.

Depending on your nationality you may also need entry visas for some countries. Under our booking conditions it is your responsibility to see that you have all the necessary immigration documentation as well as any necessary immunisation certificates. Information regarding visa requirements is covered in our specific country information which you will receive when you book. All children of

UK Citizenship require their own passport to travel abroad (if they are already on an adult passport this does not apply until that passport is amended or expires). Please allow enough time for renewal of passports or obtaining visas before you are due to depart. Especially in (northern) summer months the UK passport office is under considerable pressure and you should make allowances for this. Embassies and consulates may well take a week and sometimes a lot longer to issue visas and will usually require your passport for the purpose.

FOREIGN OFFICE ADVICE

The Foreign and Commonwealth Office issues travel advice notices periodically. For up-to-date information from the FCO contact them as follows (the website allows you to have a personalised service which advises you by email when there is a change to the advice on the country selected):

UK DEPARTURE INFORMATION

London Heathrow/Gatwick Airports

Most airlines we use offer an 'online check-in service' for their long-haul flights to Africa, usually up to 24 hours in advance of travel. However, you will still need to check-in your bags at the airport and in light of the current British Government's airport and airline security arrangements, we recommend that passengers should be at the airport to effect this process (or check-in if you do not do it online) approximately three hours prior to the departure of the flight

GENERAL INFORMATION

(for flights going through Europe, 90 minutes should be sufficient).

Please note that there are strict regulations regarding the carriage of sharp objects and liquids in hand baggage. Our final documentation will give you the most up-to-date information. Try to avoid carrying electrical items, such as razors, hairdryers, travelling irons, etc.

Long-term Parking

The following companies offer long-term parking facilities (both covered and uncovered) at Heathrow and Gatwick. Some companies offer to take your car from you on your arrival at your departure terminal and return it when you arrive back from holiday; a terminal to terminal service. National Express also operate a service between the Heathrow, Gatwick and Stansted (Gatwick to Stansted is via Heathrow), and to other airports around the UK. For further information, telephone 08705 757 747 or visit their website: www.nationalexpress.com

Insurance

It is part of our booking conditions that you take out a comprehensive travel insurance to cover all eventualities on your holiday. Few travel insurance policies, however, have high cover on personal baggage, cameras, watches, binoculars, etc. You should ensure that any such items are comprehensively covered by your own general household insurance policy. Please see our booking conditions for further information.

Expensive Personal Items

Jewellery is not a necessary item for a safari and we would strongly suggest you do not take expensive jewellery with you. Travel insurance seldom covers individual items for their specific value and jewellery can easily be mislaid, lost, stolen or damaged. We strongly recommend that if you do not wish to leave jewellery at home while you are away, you store all items in a bank safety deposit box, usually available by arrangement at your local branch.

Crime

Crime occurs throughout the world, and Africa is no exception. Most large cities and towns have a high crime rate, the result of high unemployment. Media hype can suggest that the situation is out of hand, but this is often exaggerated.

We do suggest that you use your common sense when travelling in any country, just as you would elsewhere in the world.

Violent crime is not generally targeted towards tourists, but petty crime is, so be very careful of pick-pockets etc. who are particularly active in large towns and cities. When walking through town centres and shopping malls, beware if a local approaches you as a 'friend' for a 'hand shake' - he is usually accompanied by another who will approach you from behind for a bag snatch or pick pocket.

We advise you to use the hotel safe where possible, and only carry with you small amounts of money and credit cards (which can be stopped) when in public places, preferably using a money belt. Avoid flashy jewellery, cameras, and other items which may bring attention to yourself.

Nairobi, Mombasa, Dar es Salaam, Johannesburg, Cape Town, Harare, and Lusaka city centres should be avoided if at all possible, and never visited after dark. If staying in, or visiting, Zanzibar Stone Town, be extra vigilant as the maze of narrow roads and alleyways do provide local gangs with ample escape opportunities. Recently, there have been a few instances of violent crime in the rural safari areas of Kenya. These incidental cases, whilst making headline news, are very rare. Try not to 'stick out' as a tourist and never resist an attack as this could result in more severe violence.

Safari Clothing

Extremes of temperature are sometimes encountered in Africa and it is wise to bear this in mind when packing. However, most people tend to take more clothes than they will ever use; laundry service is available, so leave behind those unnecessary extra clothes. Tough, lightweight, loose-fitting cotton clothing is best (preferably with a small amount of polyester, as 100% cotton garments tend to shrink when they are not washed according to label instructions). Shirts and jackets with plenty of pockets are very practical. For religious reasons, many lodge and camp staff will not wash ladies' underclothes so you may wish to take a small packet of hand-washing detergent. Preferred colours for approaching game (especially when walking) are green, grey, brown or khaki - no brightly coloured clothes, hats or headbands please! If you are solely undertaking a vehicle-based safari, correctly coloured clothing is not as important. Please note that camouflage clothing is not recommended and is illegal in many African countries.

With proper safari clothing often difficult to find in Britain, we suggest you look in government surplus clothing stores. Mail order clothing (more fashionable than practical) and other travel accessories are also available from SafariGear, Tel: 02921 252 922 or www.safarigear.biz and from the Nomad Travel Store (see page 7 under General Health and Accessories). In the USA, try L.L. Bean (www.llbean.com).

If you are going to the coast after your safari, it is a good idea to pack your safari and beach clothes in separate bags; city hotels or our representatives will usually look after your main luggage while you are off on safari. Some hotels and restaurants require formal dress, or at least a jacket and tie, in the evening.

The following clothing list is intended as a guide only and it really represents the absolute maximum of clothes that you would want to take. Please remember that you may be travelling on light aircraft with severe weight restrictions - most safari lodges will offer a laundry service. Bags should be of the soft 'hold-all' variety - not hard suitcases.

Further advice is available on request.

Advice on viewing wildlife and photography

Binoculars are one of the most important aspects of going on safari, and we suggest that all members of your party carry their own pair. We recommend 7x50, 8x30/40 or, for the steady hand, 10x42/50. When purchasing a pair of binoculars, be sure to handle them and see if they fit your hands comfortably, and are easy to focus. It is a good idea to ask the shop assistant if you can try the pair outside to make a better judgement on the power and quality of light. Our advice would be to spend as much as you possibly can on any purchase - you really do get what you pay for!

Cameras are also part of the holiday and the following tips might be useful. Some people buy a new camera to take on safari: if you do so, give yourself some time to learn how it works before you leave as you could make some serious mistakes if you're learning how the camera works only when you get there.

Unless you have photographed animals and birds in Africa before, it is worth doing a few rehearsals before you arrive in the bush. Go back to basics and try to duplicate safari conditions. Shoot a few rolls of film out of a car window in the early mornings and evenings, especially when the vehicle is 'rocking'. Practice panoramic shots and locations with light reflecting from a body of water. Look at the results closely, and remember that the 'excitement' factor is not present.

Use the early mornings and late afternoons for the most effective lighting; the best time for seeing wildlife. You need quick reactions and must be prepared to compose and shoot upon presentation of the subject, since few animals stand still for long. After taking 10 shots of animals walking/running away, stop! Wait for the right moment, but not too long. As a basic rule, when your vehicle is approaching an animal you may wish to photograph, prepare your camera and be ready to shoot before you arrive at the spot. In general, you will need to take the picture within a count of three, before the animal moves off.

If you are purchasing brand new equipment to take with you, please ensure you carry the proper receipts as they may be asked for by Customs (some people have even been asked by Customs for deposit payments, refunded when you leave the country with the equipment). Motionpicture equipment requires full documentation.

When it comes to equipment, if you take your photography seriously, have two camera bodies with different lenses attached. It also means that if one of your camera bodies fails for any reason you will have a back-up (it is not unknown for digital cameras to seize-up suddenly for no apparent reason - switching it off and taking out the battery often solves the problem, but animals seldom stay on one place long enough to give you time to do this while you are sitting in a vehicle).

Telephoto lenses are vital for good wildlife photos. For serious photographers and bird photography, your telephoto lens should be at least 400mm, though 300mm is usually good enough for more general shots. It is possible to attach a two-times convertor to a 200 or 300mm lens but these tend to reduce the speed of the lens by at least 2 stops which can make shooting in low light very difficult. Using a long telephoto lens often means that you will need to support it as it is difficult to hold one steady. Bean bags to rest on the side of a vehicle can sometimes be provided in camp, but can also be bought very cheaply (or you can make one yourself even more cheaply with some strong material and polystyrene balls). A monopod (which can be packed inside your baggage) with a detachable head can be really useful and flexible and well worth the investment (tripods tend to be bulky to carry and can be awkward to setup or move around inside a vehicle). A standard 50mm lens and a wide-angle (e.g. 28mm) are ideal for in-camp shots and panoramas. Use 1A skylight filters to protect your lenses.

Take a flash unit, battery charger, lead and spare batteries (at least three in total, one in the camera, one spare in the field, and one charging back in camp!).

Lodges are helpful in charging batteries but this can often only be done during the day when the camp generator is switched on. This is when you will be out on game drives so to be safe you need three batteries to make sure you're never without power.

It's also worth remembering to take the camera manual with you. You're likely to be using your camera a lot more intensively than usual or find that you need to use some different settings you don't often use at home and we can seldom remember how to change some settings we use infrequently without the manual.

Bring sufficient memory cards with you to take hundreds of shots. When you consider the cost of your safari, memory cards are cheap (and continue to get cheaper) so it pays to take plenty with you. They are light and take up very little space. You can take a laptop with you to download your photos as you go along but memory cards are so cheap it really isn't worthwhile carrying an expensive (and often heavy) laptop with you. If you carry your memory cards in a case (which is a good idea and you can get cases for 4 cards very cheaply) one helpful tip is to place the used cards the other way up in the case when you take them out of the camera. If you do this you will know which cards you have used and you're never in danger of writing over shots you have already taken. Many photographers prefer to take cards no larger than 2 or 4GB rather than some of the bigger ones now available just in case a card fails so too many shots aren't lost.

Dust is the enemy of the photographer and safaris are often dusty. Make sure you take a lens-cleaning cloth with you and a blower (remember that compressed air cylinders may not be allowed on aircraft) so you can clean your camera and lenses every day (a useful task for the period between the morning and afternoon games drives). Unless it's absolutely essential never change your lens when you're on a vehicle as you're in danger of dust getting into the camera and/or the vehicle may move suddenly when you're hands are full and you're least able to take care of your equipment. When you're travelling along dust often blows up from the tracks into the vehicle: try using a pillowcase (of a suitable colour - not white) to protect your camera and lens as you go along because a pillowcase can be removed quickly and silently unlike the bespoke camera and lens covers which often have Velcro fastenings which disturb the animals when released.

Make full use of the ISO settings which most cameras let you change. When the light is less harsh in the early mornings and late afternoons (which is often great for photography) there often isn't enough light to shoot at the usual 100 or 200 ISO - but most modern digital cameras will let you shoot at remarkably high ISOs without much digital "noise". Remember to keep an eye on the settings you're using: if you were shooting at a very high ISO in very low light at the end of an evening game drive you certainly won't want to be using the same settings when you start off the next morning. Somehow when you get back to camp on an evening after an exciting drive it's not the first thing on your mind. A famous photographer always gives the advice to "check the zeros" (i.e. make sure everything is reset to your normal settings) every morning. It's also important to keep an eye on your settings as you go along: cameras now have a whole host of dials and switches which can inadvertently be moved as you bounce along in the back of a vehicle and you can find a number of your settings have accidentally changed. When it's a particularly exciting or unexpected sighting you're concerning on focus and composition and can sometimes forget aperture and shutter speed.

GENERAL INFORMATION

Most safari photographers tend to shoot using the aperture-priority mode on their camera so that they can control the depth of field. If this is your choice and you're using a telephoto lens the golden rule is to try and ensure that the shutter speed never falls too low for the aperture you are using. For a hand-held shot if you're using a lens at a focal length of 200mm the shutter speed ideally shouldn't fall below 1/200; for 500mm it shouldn't fall below 1/500 etc. If you have a lens with Image Stabilisation (Canon) or Vibration Reduction (Nikon) you have more flexibility. In low light if your lens isn't particularly fast and you can't reduce the aperture further to keep an appropriate shutter speed don't forget you can increase the ISO and continue shooting.

The two key points for success in taking pictures on safari is to take lots and to focus on the eyes of the animal or bird. For this reason it's often best to set your camera to a particular focus point or a limited number of points rather than using a fully automatic focus setting. Animals are often in the bush and unless you're careful you will find that the camera often automatically focuses on a branch or on some grass rather than the animal itself. You need to be ready at all times to be quick and take a shot without much preparation as animals seldom stand still to wait until you have taken a photo. You never know what might be behind the next corner or tree so be ready. The best shots are usually of animals looking at you (focus on the eyes!) or coming towards you: once an animal moves away it's usually best to stop shooting, although one of the back end of an elephant can make an amusing shot.

If your camera lets you, always shoot RAW. The files are bigger but memory is cheap and you have much more flexibility in dealing with your photos when you get home: many mistakes can be rectified and adjustments made from a RAW file which can't be from a JPEG.

When photographing dark-skinned Africans, compensate for the meter reading by opening 1 F stop (e.g. from f5.6 to f8), or use strong front lighting or fill-in flash.

When photographing locals be discreet. Ask permission (but you may then have to pay) or ensure you are not seen. Don't take photos of police, soldiers, officials, military establishments, airports or the national flag, without first finding out if this is acceptable.

When photographing standing up from the height of a four-wheel drive vehicle, some pictures have a 'looked down upon' quality, a frequent fault in game photography. Shooting at window level will give a more realistic eye-level perspective.

If you are serious about your photography, you should be escorted by a professional safari guide who is also a photographer, or a safari guide who at the very least understands the requirements of wildlife photography. The trading of ideas and the guide's sensitivity to setting up shots will be of immeasurable help in getting the best possible photographs.

Guide Books

Although most good safari companies will have guide books available in vehicles, they are generally used by everyone. It is therefore worthwhile to consider taking your own guide books, particularly if you have special interests in animals, birds, Lepidoptera, botany, etc. We do stock a small selection of guide books for East and Southern Africa and would be pleased to offer advice on what is best for your holiday. Please call us on 01787 888590.

TERMS AND CONDITIONS

1 Booking & Acceptance

To make a booking: Please complete all sections of the booking form and sign it. The signatory must be a party member and he or she will be deemed to be the authorised agent of the other party members. Each member of the party should also complete an information form (further copies are available from us) detailing all special requirements and any pre-existing health conditions. Send the completed booking form, information forms, and the deposit to us.

If we cannot accept your booking we will notify you and return your deposit to you.

Your booking becomes definite and a binding contract will come into existence when we issue a written confirmation. These booking conditions together with either the itinerary prepared for you or the literature description of the holiday and the information contained in this brochure form the terms of that contract. It will be governed by English law and English courts are to have exclusive jurisdiction.

If the special requirements section of the booking form is not completed we shall assume that the relevant party members have no special requirements. Compliance with special requirements will not form part of the contract unless we accept responsibility in writing. If we do not, we will still do our best to notify the relevant airlines, lodges, safari operators etc. of any special requirements included but cannot guarantee that they will be catered for.

All written correspondence and other communications will be sent to whoever signed the booking form at their address given in it unless he or she instructs us to send it somewhere else. If you book through a travel agent we will communicate with that agent instead.

2 Deposits & Other Payments

If you book more than eight weeks before your departure date the deposit, which must accompany your completed booking form, is 40% of the full holiday price unless the next paragraph applies. If you book less than eight weeks before your departure date payment of the full holiday price is required when you book. If you book more than eight weeks before the departure date the balance of the full holiday price is due eight weeks before departure. If some members of your party depart on different dates the relevant date, for all purposes connected with these booking conditions, is the earliest departure date.

It is sometimes necessary to make different arrangements about deposits and balance payments. If this is so we will say so in writing and agree these with you before accepting your booking.

If you book through a travel agent any money you pay the travel agent is held by the agent on behalf of us until such time it is paid to us. We will issue confirmation on receipt of the money.

If you do not pay the balance of the holiday price in full when due we reserve the right to treat this as a cancellation by you and condition 4 will apply if we do so. However we will not exercise this right without telling you before we do so.

On certain rare occasions it is necessary for us to quote prices of all or part of some holidays in US dollars or other non-sterling currencies. Payment must be made in the currency or currencies stipulated in your itinerary.

Payments may be made by Credit/Debit or Switch card. Deposit payments will be at face value, but other or final payments will carry a surcharge of 2.5% to cover costs.

3 Alterations By You

If you wish to change the arrangements after you have booked we will do our best to assist you if you let us know in writing at least 42 days before the departure date. However we cannot guarantee that we will be able to make satisfactory alternative arrangements. We reserve the right to charge an alteration fee of £40 per party member in addition to any other costs and expenses incurred by us in making or trying to make alternative arrangements. These fees, costs and expenses will be payable whether or not we succeed in making suitable alternative arrangements. If we do succeed we will send you a revised itinerary and booking confirmation, which will replace all previous itineraries and confirmations.

4 Cancellation By You

Cancellations by you must be in writing. We advise you to make them by Recorded Delivery but we will accept fax cancellations if they are received by us, signed by whoever signed the booking form and clearly and unambiguously indicate what is being cancelled. They will be effective on the day we get them.

Except where your holiday arrangements include exclusive use of facilities the following cancellation charges will apply:

Date notice received	Cancellation charge (% of full price)
57 or more days before departure	40 %
45 to 56 days before departure	80 %
45 or less days before departure	100 %

These cancellation charges are applicable to cancellation by each individual party member but we reserve the right to treat cancellation by one or more but not all party members as an alteration by the remaining party members and condition 6 will apply if payment of single supplements or other similar charges becomes necessary as a result of cancellation by some but not all party members.

If your arrangements include exclusive use of a camp, lodge or safari operation then the above cancellation charges only apply if all party members cancel. The price per person for exclusive arrangements is calculated by reference to the number of people in your party and so different cancellation charges may apply if some but not all members wish to cancel exclusive arrangements. In these circumstances we will tell you in writing what cancellation charges will apply to cancellation by some but not all party members before accepting your booking and agree these with you.

If you are prevented from taking your holiday for reasons outside your control (e.g. illness, death of a close relative, jury service or employer's requirements) you may transfer your booking to someone else but only if you give us reasonable prior notice. The transferee must be a suitable person to participate in the booked arrangements. We reserve the right to charge you any additional costs and expenses incurred by us in effecting such a transfer together with an administration charge of £40 per party member transferred. Both the transferrer and the transferee will be jointly and severally liable for all outstanding payments due under the contract including payments due under this condition.

We insist that you take out cancellation insurance (please see condition 12).

5 Alterations By Us

We take great care over the descriptions, information and prices given in our brochures and tailor-made itineraries. Where changes (including price alterations) occur, we reserve the right to alter your holiday but will do our best to tell you before you send us a completed booking form. We will tell you if we become aware of any reason why a change has to be made before accepting your booking and issuing a booking confirmation.

We make every effort to ensure that, once your booking has been accepted, your holiday proceeds as booked. However if we cannot avoid changing the booked arrangements we reserve the right to do so and will inform you as soon as possible and tell you what the altered arrangements are. If the alteration is significant, we will tell you what altered arrangements we are able to propose and what price changes (if any) are necessary. If the alteration is significant you have the right to choose either to accept the new arrangements and price, or to withdraw from your contract with us. You must inform us what you decide as soon as possible.

If you decide to accept the altered arrangements then any increased price due from you will be payable as specified in Condition 2. If the price is reduced we will make the appropriate refund or take account of the reduction in calculating any outstanding balance still due. If you decide to cancel the arrangements we will refund all sums paid by you up till then (but not insurance premiums or alteration fees) as soon as possible. We will also, if appropriate, pay you reasonable compensation, unless the significant alteration is due to Force Majeure. No compensation is payable for insignificant alterations.

6 Cancellation By Us

Naturally we will do our best to ensure that we are not obliged to cancel the arrangements after we have issued a booking confirmation. However we reserve the right to do so. If we are, we will use every effort to offer you other arrangements which match the previously booked ones as closely as possible. You may choose to accept or reject them. You must inform us of your decision as soon as possible.

If you decide to accept the substitute arrangements then any increased price due from you will be payable as specified in Condition 2. If the price of the substitute arrangements is less than that of the previous arrangements we will make the appropriate refund as soon as possible or take account of the reduction in calculating any outstanding balance still due.

If you decide to reject the substitute arrangements we will refund all sums paid by you up till then (but not insurance premiums or alteration fees) as soon as possible. We will also, if appropriate, pay you reasonable compensation, unless the cancellation is due to Force Majeure.

We offer some holiday arrangements the availability of which is dependent on us achieving a minimum number of participants booking in addition to you. Where applicable, this is clearly indicated in our brochures and itineraries, which state the minimum and maximum number of participants and the date by which the required number of bookings must have been made. We will notify you either as soon as the required number has been reached or, as soon as possible after the relevant date, if the required number of bookings has not been achieved. In the latter case we reserve the right to cancel your booking and will refund as soon as possible all sums paid by you up till then. No compensation is payable by us for cancellations made because a minimum number of participants is required but not achieved.

7 Post-departure Changes Alterations

Naturally we do all we can to ensure that the arrangements booked proceed smoothly after departure. However if for some extraordinary reason we have to alter a significant proportion of the booked arrangements after you depart, we will do our best to make suitable alternative arrangements to enable you to continue your holiday at no extra cost to you. We will inform you of these as soon as we can. If you accept the alternative arrangements we will, if appropriate, pay you reasonable compensation for the difference (if any) between the booked arrangements and the alternative arrangements actually supplied.

If either we find ourselves unable to make such arrangements or you reject them for good reasons we will arrange for you to be transported by equivalent means back to your departure point or to some other place agreed between us and, if appropriate, pay you reasonable compensation.

8 Prices

The price quoted for your holiday and/or travel arrangements in our brochure or the tailor-made itinerary is fixed once we issue a booking confirmation. They will not be increased after that except to allow for increases in:

- transportation costs, including the cost of fuel,
- dues, taxes or fees chargeable for services such as landing taxes or embarkation or disembarkation fees at ports and airports, including variations in VAT and other general taxes, or
- the exchange rates applied to the arrangements booked by you.

We will absorb any price increases attributable to the above factors up to a maximum increase equal to 2% of the total holiday price. If increases in the price of these factors increase the cost to us of your holiday by more than 2% we reserve the right to charge you the amount of such increase less that first 2%.

If we do decide we have to increase the cost of your holiday we will notify you in writing as soon as reasonably practical and identify in detail which element of your holiday price has increased, by how much and what the resulting price increase of your holiday is. We will also send you a fresh booking confirmation and a supplementary invoice.

However we will not exercise this right less than 30 days before your departure date. We will not make additional administration or other charges of our own for dealing with any increase in the price of your holiday. Further, if any price increase passed on by us to you would increase the cost of your holiday to you by more than 10% you may treat this as a significant alteration and may exercise your rights set out in condition 6. For these reasons, the price of your holiday will not be reduced because of variations in these factors.

If you want to avoid the risk of price increases under this condition and you pay the full holiday price within 7 days after we send you (or your travel agent) the booking confirmation then the price of your holiday will be absolutely fixed and we will not exercise our rights under this condition.

9 Our Liability

We accept liability to you, in accordance with Regulation 15 of the Package Travel, Package Holidays and Package Tours Regulations 1992, for the proper performance of our obligations under the contract. These are to provide you the holiday you booked, in accordance with both the description in our brochure or tailor-made itinerary and the contract, and to do so to a reasonable standard. Our statutory liability applies irrespective of whether such obligations are to be performed by us or by other suppliers of services. It is subject to exceptions which are set out in the Regulations. In summary, these apply where the failure to perform the contract or improper performance is due neither to our fault nor to that of any one supplying services to us but is due or attributable to:

- you,
- unforeseeable or unavoidable failures attributable to unconnected third parties,
- Force Majeure, or
- events which neither we nor our suppliers could, even with all due care, foresee.

If you suffer any difficulties in the circumstances outlined in paragraphs c and d we will do our best to assist within reasonable limits. However in doing so we shall not be obliged to pay money to you or any third party, but we will not charge you for our assistance.

Our liability to pay you compensation for damage arising from non-performance or improper performance of the contract is limited in accordance with applicable or relevant international conventions. These include the Warsaw, Geneva, Berne, Athens and Paris Conventions.

In addition, our maximum liability to pay you compensation for damage (other than personal injury) is limited to:

- refund of the total holiday price (but not insurance premiums or alteration fees) in respect of diminution of the value of the holiday,

- £96 per day per party member (in respect of loss of enjoyment etc.), and
- any special damages (e.g. out of pocket expenses) awarded by the court or by the mediator under the AITO independent dispute settlement service.

10 Complaints

If you are unhappy with any aspect of your holiday while you are away you must address your complaint to management of the relevant safari operator, lodge, hotel or travel operator immediately, and to us by fax, telephone or email at the earliest possible opportunity. Please insist that the relevant safari operator or other supplier communicates your complaint to us if you cannot make contact direct. If your arrangements include provision by us of an accompanying group leader or local guide please address your concerns to him or her too as soon as possible.

If the problem is not resolved to your satisfaction by the time you return please let us have full written details within 30 days after you return. Failure by you to complain promptly while on holiday and/or within the 30 day limit may prejudice your legal rights.

In the very unusual event that you and we cannot resolve any dispute amicably you may wish to refer the dispute to the AITO independent dispute settlement service which exists to help clients of AITO members to have their complaints satisfactorily resolved at low cost without recourse to litigation. The AITO service is not available if the claim involves personal injury or medical issues. Please contact us for further details of the AITO scheme.

However it is your responsibility to ensure that you check the requirements applicable to you before you depart, that you comply with them and to ensure that all necessary passports and visas etc. do not expire until well after you expect to return. We do not accept liability if you fail to do these things.

It is your responsibility to check in for flights at the correct time and to be in the right place at the right time for ground travel arrangements etc. We do not accept liability if you fail to do so. No credits or refunds will be given for lost or mislaid air tickets or other travel documents.

It is a condition of your contract with us that you act with reasonable prudence and circumspection whilst on holiday and that you comply with all the health and safety requirements of guides and safari operators etc.

In these cases our only obligation is to use our best endeavours to reserve your place(s). I am aware that during the safari in which I am participating that certain risks may occur including but not limited to the hazards associated with travelling in rugged wilderness terrain on foot or by vehicle, horse-back or any other conveyance. I am aware that the safari may be in isolated areas, often away from proper medical facilities, and confirm that I am physically fit to undertake the safari booked. I understand that I am responsible for taking out adequate insurance to cover all aspects of my safari (if we have provided the insurance, please ignore this), that some camps may require indemnity forms to be completed, and that I have read and accepted Safari Consultants' Terms and Conditions.
